This talk presents a new reading of Shakespeare’s Merchant of Venice, using historical evidence to put the play in conversation with the legend of the Wandering Jew.

Galit Hasan-Rokem is the Max and Margarethe Grunwald professor emerita of folklore and of Hebrew literature at the Mandel Institute of Jewish Studies at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. A leading scholar in the field of folklore, her research treats proverbs, folklore and culture of the Middle East and folklore genres and narratives, including the folklore of rabbinic literature. Her work has been translated into more than eight languages and she has been guest professor and fellow at Ben-Gurion University of Negev, the University of California at Berkeley, the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Chicago. Among her many scholarly works are Tales of the Neighborhood: Jewish Narrative Dialogues in Late Antiquity. University of California Press. 2003 and Web of Life: Folklore and Midrash in Rabbinic Literature. Stanford University Press. 2000. She is also a published poet and translator of poetry.