When Yiddish Was Young: Vilna's Last Generation

WITH JUSTIN CAMMY

This talk will explore the last major Yiddish literary group in interwar Poland -- Young Vilna. How did its aspiring young writers interpret a world that was both terrifying and electrifying? How did they navigate their responsibilities to local tradition and modernist innovation, political radicalism and communal responsibility?

Justin Cammy is associate professor of Comparative Literature and Director of Jewish Studies at Smith College in Massachusetts. His research focuses on Yiddish literary and cultural history. Cammy is faculty-in-residence at both the Yiddish Book Center and Tel Aviv University summer programs in Yiddish language, literature and culture.